South Seattle Community College Culinary Arts Faculty and Students Take Part in Governor's Inaugural Ball

South Seattle Community College's Culinary Program had the honor of sending some of its members to help make Gov. Gary Locke's inauguration a savory success.

South Seattle Community College (SSCC) sent two chef-instructors and 12 students to Olympia on Jan. 10. The delegation was part of a team of approximately 150 chefs and students that gathered from across the state to chip in their culinary talents at the black tie affair.

The Washington State Chef's Association (WSCA) was responsible for creating the inaugural culinary team, as well as organizing the feast. The WSCA is also the regional arm of the American Culinary Federation, which accredits the college's Culinary Arts Program. All members of SSCC's delegation are members of the WSCA.

SSCC's Culinary Arts Program sent the following representatives to the festivity: Chef-Instructors Karl Hutter and Stephen Sparks and students Tracy Chui, Dee Hartman, Michelle Jun, Jesse Just, Steven Meith, Stephanie Saleman, Rose Schell, Debra Troutman, Andrew Walls, Dennis White, Jim Young, and Laura Young.

SSCC's culinary delegation prepared assorted petite quiches and smoked salmon canapés for the inauguration that marked Gov. Locke's second term and the third century in which Washington has observed the inaugural tradition.
