South Seattle Community College Presents “Of Many Colors: Portraits of Multiracial Families”

Join the South Seattle Community College (SSCC) Art Gallery in a celebration of diversity with the exhibit “Of Many Colors: Portraits of Multiracial Families,” which runs from Nov. 13 to Dec. 11.

The exhibit was created and is distributed by Family Diversity Projects, Inc. of Amherst, Mass. It includes photos by Gigi Kaeser and interviews with twenty diverse American families formed through interracial relationships or transracial adoption.

The Family Diversity Projects’ Web site describes the exhibit this way: “In a world where race is considered by many to be a formidable barrier between people, the families in this exhibit are celebrated as twentieth century pioneers willing to risk disapproval and misunderstanding to find richness and value in diversity.” To learn more go to <http://www.familydiv.org/ofmanycolors>.

As a part of the exhibit, the SSCC Art Gallery will also include photographs and family artifacts from area residents. The submissions are a reflection of the rich multicultural and multiracial community around us.
