South Announces 2011-2012 NISOD Winners

Two faculty members honored for excellence

South Seattle Community College instructors Doug Clapper, Heavy Duty Diesel/Professional Technical Education, and Mike Steffancin, Physics/Academic Programs, have been honored with 2011 Excellence Awards by the National Institute for Staff and Organizational Development (NISOD).

Clapper and Steffancin were honored for their consistent teaching excellence and commitment to South Seattle Community College, both in length and quality of service. Additional criteria included participation in activities that support the college's mission and goals, and demonstrated professional development in both teaching and content area.

They were recommended for award consideration by faculty, staff, students, and administrators, and selected by an award committee composed of former South NISOD winners.

Award recipients will be recognized at the annual NISOD Conference, May 27-30, 2012, in Austin, Texas.

Additional information about NISOD and the Excellence Awards is available on their website at <http://www.nisod.org>.
