The scholarships are awarded annually to graduating high school seniors and provide for a year's tuition in the coming academic year. To qualify for the scholarships, students must display academic excellence and/or financial need and must also show evidence of exceptional leadership and/or involvement in school and community activities.

A presentation of the scholarships was recently held at a reception at SSCC.

South Seattle Community College is located in West Seattle, has 7,500 students and is a member of the Seattle Community College District. Fall quarter begins September 24.
