Math Help for High School Students

Are your high school math problems too complex for family and friends to help, but you don't want to pay private tutor rates? South Seattle Community College provides a study alternative for area high school students: drop-in math tutoring.

For the cost of one college credit ($65.80), plus $5 student ID card fee, high school students can find inexpensive help for their math studies every quarter at South Seattle Community College.

The format is a drop-in tutor lab, not private sessions. Students must be currently enrolled in a high school math class. Interested students or parents can request an enrollment kit by calling (206) 768-6691.

What: MATH 089 – Math Tutoring for High School Students

When: Spring Quarter – April 5 through June 18

Where: Math and Science Tutoring Center (MAST)
South Seattle Community College Library, 2nd floor, room 216
6000 16th Ave., SW, Seattle, WA 98106-1499

Hours: Monday – Thursday: 3:00 to 5:00 p.m.
