In addition, you need to be in direct communication with the schools you are interested in to find out their transfer policies, what courses they will accept, how many credits they will accept, prerequisite courses, and what steps you need to take to apply. Some out-of-state schools may require the SAT or ACT exam and letters of recommendation.

Why do I have to apply to more than one school?
Admissions at the four-year universities can change from year to year. While one year you might be very competitive for admission, the next year might have a stronger applicant pool or not as many spaces available. You always want to have options when it comes time to decide which school to attend. In addition, financial aid and money are often an important part of your college decision and you will want to compare costs at several schools. You need to apply to several schools, even if you only have one in mind, to ensure that you have a place to transfer.
