Funding Help!

For transfer students planning to transfer for any quarter next year (Summer 2011-Spring 2012), it is very important that you have completed the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) and list each school that you are considering attending. In addition, you need to check in directly with each college/university to submit any additional paperwork or documentation they might need. Most universities have a priority financial aid date that you should do your absolute best to meet.

However, if you have missed the deadline, you should STILL APPLY and apply as soon as possible. The federal and state budgets are very tight in the world of higher education and there seems to be less money for more students. Please make sure you have applied early and correctly to give yourself the best chance to receive financial aid.

Scholarships are another important part of funding your college experience. Check out the opportunities to the left or check out the links below to start your scholarship search and application process:

There are a ton of scholarships out there and it is your job to find them! Ask your advisors/counselors, faculty members, and friends about opportunities and start applying! Also be sure to check with your universities directly. Many of them offer big scholarships for transfer students based on your grades, leadership, and merit.
